Rights for

Which rights do I have in a reception center or communal accommodation for refugees?

This booklet was produced by people who are active in the groups Lea-watch Freiburg, Aktion Bleiberecht Freiburg, MediNetz-Freiburg and the Anti-Racist Network Baden-Württemberg.

Foreword

The editors of this brochure are initiatives that support the rights of refugees and advocate the right to stay.

It is important to us to inform you about your rights as a resident of a state reception facility / accommodation for refugees and to stand together with you for better living conditions.

Furthermore, we are happy to support you if your rights have not been or are not respected. Together with you, we will document infringements, refer you to experts or help you to take legal action.

You are welcome to contact us. You will find the address for Freiburg in the Guide on pages 6 and 7. You will find further addresses in the inserted supplementary sheet.

The rights described are based on existing fundamental and human rights. [1]

We have formulated the information in this brochure to the best of our knowledge. However, this brochure does not replace individual (legal) advice. The brochure is based on numerous sources for whose accuracy and completeness we cannot guarantee.

In our research, we have discovered that in many of the individual points addressed in this brochure, no clear case law exists. The brochure can therefore only be used for orientation and argumentation purposes. Each individual case must be considered individually. At best case, every protest can contribute to the observance of fundamental rights.

Residents of a state first reception facility find themselves in a difficult situation. Numerous rights that affect everyday life in the state first reception facility have been restricted by law. Thus, the right to self-determination in daily life is suspended.

If you experience violations of fundamental and human rights in your institution, you can contact us. You can also contact us anonymously. Standing up for your rights is protected by law.

If you become a witness of violations of fundamental rights, but do not know what to do in the concrete situation, note down the violations committed in your opinion.

Write down the day, the time, the cause of the problem, the names of the people involved and the exact sequents of events. Have witnesses confirm the process.

House rules

What rights do I have in a state first reception facility?

Life in the institution is regulated by the HOUSE RU-LES. The house rules must formulate clear and understandable basic rules and rights that apply to ALL persons, whether refugees, staff or visitors.

The house rules must be given to you in your language or published in a central place. If no house rules have been handed over to you, take a picture and read the house rules at your leisure. You can also ask for a copy in your own language.

The house rules and other regulations must not violate applicable law. Unfortunately, this happens all too often.

Security checks on entry

What rights do I have during the security check upon entry to the camp?

The security may inspect bags being carried by those seeking entry to the camp, if this is specified in the house rules. The house rules must state which items you are not allowed to bring into your accommodation. Information about items that may not be brought into the accommodation must also be displayed at the entrance to the accommodation. In addition, the security at the entrance may check your "Heim-Ausweis". [2]

The recording of personal data or a comparison of identity documents for visitors is not permitted. It is not clear whether it is permissible for the security to inspect the bags of visitors. [3] Security checks must be kept to a minimum.

What is the security guard NOT allowed to do?

As already mentioned at the beginning, the tasks of security are regulated in the house rules and the operating contract and are transferred to the security within the framework of the house law that applies in your institution.

The security are subject to the civil law and have no more powers than any other people. Fundamentally, it is highly questionable, in the light of the existing laws on refugee accomodation in the state of Baden-Württemberg, whether the security is at all authorized to intervene in fundamental rights, for example by carrying out bag checks or enter rooms.

The security may not carry out any physical searches. They are not allowed to carry out any searches of residents inside the accommodation without prior warning. The measures taken by the Securities must be measured against proportionality and fundamental rights. [4] see also [3]

Security can't record any personal information. The security is not allowed to keep passports.

Mail

Confidentiality of mail and letters

You must be informed when you receive mail. Your mail may only be opened by you. If a letter to you was opened by a second person, this is a criminal offence. [5] You alone decide who may read the mail and who may not. You are not obliged to discuss the content of your mail with social workers or other staff in the camp

Postal delivery and distribution times must be published for each working day.

Actually, a central mail distribution in shared accommodation at fixed pick-up times restricts the fundamental rights of the persons concerned and must be questioned. This is especially the case when mail distribution collides with German course or working times. [6]

It is not permitted to link the issue of mail to an attendance check.

Rights in my room

What rights do I have in my room?

The Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth and UNICEF demand locked, lockable and barrier-free accommodation units in shared accommodation facilities. [7]

The room, which you usually have to share with others, is legally protected as a place of residence. This is even stated in the house rules in Freiburg. [8]

This means that you and your roommates have the householder's right to decide who may enter the room and who may not, and when they may enter. [9]

Home workers, security, social workers and the police don't have the right to enter the room without your permission. [10]

It is not permitted to check your rooms on a daily basis against your consent (even if this is stated in the operator contract or in the house rules).

If you are in the room, anyone who wishes to enter must knock and wait whether you want to receive them. Only in acute emergencies, e.g. fire, or if there is concern that someone in your room may be harmed, intrusion is permitted without your permission. [11]

The only exception that allows the police to enter your room against your will is when a judicial search warrant has been issued. [12]

If the house rules clearly define which furniture and electrical appliances are prohibited and which are permitted, superficial controls by the operator of the facility are permitted. However, these superficial room inspections must be announced in advance. The announcement must explain why your room should be searched. The room checks may not be routine and may only be carried out in your absence if you are aware of them. [13]

Antidiskriminierungsberatung Brandenburg / Opferperspektive e.V. Rudolf-Breitscheid-Straße 164 14482 Potsdam antidiskriminierung@opferperspektive.de www.antidiskriminierung-brandenburg.de

May the district government (Regierungspräsidium) or the director of an accommodation facility order a room to be searched?

No, neither the Regierungspräsidium nor the director of the camp may initiate or carry out searches. Only the police may carry them out and only with a judicial search warrant. [14]

Is anyone allowed to enter my room when I'm not there?

Your room may not be entered without your consent or that of your roommates even if you are absent. For example, if something needs to be repaired, you must be informed in advance. Room checks in your absence or without prior notice are not legal and can be reported to the police. This also applies if the rooms are not lockable. [15]

Are dining rooms or canteens protected?

No, in contrast to the living quarters, dining rooms are not considered places of residence and are therefore not specially protected. Employees, security and police have free access to these rooms. [16]

However, if a separate kitchen is attached to the rooms, this is also considered a place of residence and may not be entered without your consent. [17]

May sanitary facilities be entered?

Showers, guard rooms and toilets are also subject to special protection and may not be entered by personnel, security or the police without a court order to search them. [18]

Search warrant

What can I do if there is a search warrant?

If a judicial search order has been issued, your room may be searched by the police. The decision can also be appealed against after the search. [19]

If the police want to enter your room, you have the right to be shown the search warrant and to ask against whom it is directed. You have the right to ask for a copy of the order. You also have the right to ask for the name and identification number of the police officer in charge.

You have the right to prosecute the search. You can contest the search afterwards. An independent person should always be present during the search. The police are only allowed to search your room, cupboards and objects. [20]

If you live in a shared room, the police do not have the right to search the property of your roommates.

After the search, the police will have to give you a search report that records what items have been confiscated. This must be signed by the officers. You do not have to sign the document.

After a police search of your room, it is advisable to contact a lawyer.

Further rights

Bans on alcohol and smoking

An absolute ban on alcohol and smoking is a violation of basic rights. Smoking is not even banned in prison cells. [21]

Lockable cupboards

In shared accommodation, individually lockable cupboards must be provided in multi-bed rooms. [22]

Being banned from the camp

Can I be banned from the camp?

You can only be banned for very specific reasons. If you grossly disturb the peace and order of the accommodation or cause considerable nuisance to other residents, you may be banned from occupying the house. [23] You cannot and must not be banned for complaining about the living conditions in your accommodation.

A general ban on entering or being in the camp can also be issued by the security if it has been granted the authority of the administrative management to do so. The ban must be justified in writing. [24]

Such a ban cannot cause someone to become homeless. You can take legal action against it.

If a ban is imposed on you, please contact us immediately.

The right to receive visits

May the house rules forbid visits?

No! House rules that do not allow visitors should be legally reviewed and challenged.

In principle, you have the right to receive personal visitors in your room, be they family members, friends, acquaintances or supporters and legal advisors. [25] This is covered by various fundamental rights.

If you are staying in a shared room, you should consider the personal rights of the other room occupants. They should not feel disturbed by your visits.

Rights of visitors

Can my visitor be denied entrance?

Your visit may not be prohibited from entering the camp or the buildung. You have the right to receive visitors. [26]

The visit may only be banned if there are concrete objective dangers for residents or employees of the facility. [27]

The same applies to other tangible threats to security and order and the suspicion of impending criminal offences

In case of deportation

May the police enter or search my room in the course of a deportation?

No, the police may not enter or search your room against your will during a deportation. [28] Even if there is an enforceable obligation to leave the country and you are to be deported, the police may not enter your room without a search warrant. There is a recent ruling by the Hamburg Administrative Court on this. [29] According to the Police Act, deportations may not take place between 9 p.m. and 4 a.m. in the period from April 1 to September 30, and between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m. in the period from October 1 to March 31. [29a]

Can all rooms or floors be entered or searched during a deportation in my accommodation?

No, this is not permitted. The police may only enter the room of the person who is to be deported, provided a judicial search warrant exists.

What happens if I was absent when the police came to attempt a deportation?

As you are granted freedom of movement within the district of your immigration office (Ausländerbehörde), you are allowed to stay outside the facility. You also do not have to indicate where you are. [30]

However, we strongly recommend that you report to your accommodation at least every 3 days, so that no one will accuse you of having disappeared. Of course you are also allowed to stay in different rooms of the facilities. If you are not present when an attempt to deport you is made, then you cannot be accused of preventing / avoiding deportation.

The situation is different, however, if the exact deportation date and time was communicated in writing. In this case, if you are absent, your money may be cancelled and you could face deportation custody.

What do I do if the date of my deportation was announced?

If you have been informed of the date of deportation, contact your lawyer, an NGO or a person trust immediately. Check legal possibilities immediately. You can also contact us.

What can I do if I am forbidden in writing to stay overnight outside the LEA (camp)?

Nobody can force you to stay at a certain place at a certain time

You can appeal against this order. If you receive a letter asking you not to leave the LEA at night, please contact us.

The Lüneburg Administrative Court issued a legally bindung decision on this matter on 22 November 2017 [31].

Freedom of opinion Right to information

What rights do I have with regard to freedom of opinion and freedom of information in a reception facility?

In principle, freedom of expression applies in the Federal Republic of Germany. This means that you may freely express and disseminate your opinion. Expressing your opinion must not be detrimental to your asylum procedure or result in a ban from the camp [32].

All people in Germany have the right to freedom of information [33]. For example, you have the right to obtain information about your asylum procedure. In order to obtain information relating to your life in Germany, social workers are available to help you if you wish. This applies, for example, to applications for benefits, housing, schooling for your children, the possibility to get a job or start training.

May I subscribe to newspapers

Furthermore, you have the right to receive newspapers and magazines without permission and to access the Internet in order to obtain comprehensive information.

Do camp directors and employees have any influence on my asylum procedure?

Home management, personnel, security and social workers have no influence on the decisions of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF). They do not have the right to pass on information about you to the BAMF, which is responsible for your asylum application. It is irrelevant for your asylum application what the home employees say about you and what they say to you. See also [32]

Right to complain

What legal action can I take against violations?

If caretakers, security staff, social workers, other camp employees, the responsible authorities or the police disregard and violate your rights, you, as residents can take legal action against them. [34]

All people in the Federal Republic of Germany are entitled to this right and therefore so are you.

Where can I get help?

You can get help through our emergency number! Make an appointment with us, then we will clarify the facts. Where there are clear violations of basic and human rights, we will support you.

Do I have the right to complain about discriminatory behaviour in the accomodation facility?

Yes! You have the right to criticise discriminatory incidents in the institution, to lodge complaints and to insist that discriminatory behaviour be stopped. These complaints are not allowed to have a negative impact on you. If you or others become victims of discrimination, you have a right to have your complaint heard and resolved. Document the incident for this purpose. [35]

Note: The protection of the "General Equal Treatment Act" applies to all persons, regardless of their residence status. For people who have not been living in Germany for long, this protection is particularly important in the areas of work, housing and services. However, various investigations by the Anti-Discrimination Agency have shown that it is precisely in these areas of life that refugee experience discrimination particularly frequently.

The Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency gives you free and confidential advice. It can also help you to find an advice office close to you:

+49 (0) 30 18555-1855Monday 1-3PM, Wednesday and Friday 9–12 AM [36]

Do I have the right to complain about procedures that affect my everyday life?

Yes, in general you always have the right to complain! If, for example, the food is not enough for you or you are not satisfied with the procedures (e.g. distribution times of food and money). You may also be able to take legal or political action against them. Also, these complaints may not affect you negatively.

Right to health

Which rights do I have regarding medical treatment?

You have the right to any necessary medical treatment, especially if you are in pain, acute discomfort, are pregnant or suffer from a chronic illness. [37]

But it also includes officially recommended vaccinations and precautions. [38]

If you have been staying in Germany for 15 months or longer, you are entitled to regular statutory health insurance. [39]

Especially in the case of psychological suffering and traumatisation, you are entitled to diagnosis, counselling and, if necessary, treatment. [40]

Where can I get help if this right is denied to me?

If your complaints are not sufficiently diagnosed and treated at the clinic which is run by the University Hospital within the premises of the camp, please contact the Medinetz Freiburg. (see page 6)

What should I do in the event of a medical emergency outside of the university hospital's care hours?

If you need medical help or an emergency doctor or ambulance outside of the care hours at the university hospital, the domestic staff or the security staff must ensure that you receive emergency medical care. If the employees refuse, they are liable to prosecution. Security or other camp employees do not have the right to decide what medical care you need. [41]

In an emergency, you may of course always visit a hospital yourself.

Right to protection

Which rights do I have if I experience racism within the camp?

Racism is punishable by law. If you are insulted, defamed or discriminated against because of your origin, religion or skin colour, you can sue the person. It is best to write down the exact wording, date, time and situation. If other people were present, let them witness the incident. [42]

Which rights do I have if I experience violence within the camp?

If you have been subjected to violence, e.g. sexual assault, you have the right to immediate protection and assistance. This includes personal support, accompaniment and counselling. In the case of sexualised Violence, you can also contact the women's representative of the institution. You and all other social workers are bound to secrecy and may not act arbitrarily.

If you have experienced a sexual assault, you alone decide on all further steps: The police will only be involved if you want them to be. You decide whether to file a complaint or not. Regardless of whether you want to file a complaint, you have the right to have the perpetrator transferred to another institution. You cannot be forced to continue living with the offender in the same facility, nor can you be required to move to another facility against your will.

The institution is obliged to find a settlement acceptable to you. Any action taken by the institution must be agreed with you. You are also, of course, entitled to medical and psychological examinations and treatment. You are also entitled to visit an independent counselling centre. Here you can get advice regarding your rights from independent female counsellors.

The visit is for your information only. The counselling centre is networked with numerous interpreters and can therefore also advise you in your mother tongue. [43]

In Germany sexual harassment is also punishable. Especially if it is done by an employee in the shared accommodation, by the security or by the police.

Sexual harassment includes:

- "unwanted sexual acts" such as oppressive physical closeness
- "the call to unwanted sexual acts," like "sit on my lap!"
- "physical touches with sexual intent", including (seemingly accidental) touching of the chest or bottom, or unwanted neck massages,
- "remarks of sexual content," such as obscene jokes or sexual innuendo,
- "unwanted showing or display of pornographic representations", such as pornographic magazines on the desk or nude photos on the walls. [44] [45]

For important advice centres in Freiburg see page 7.

In which cases am I entitled to special protection?

Some refugees are classified as "particularly vulnerable". If you have a disability, are ill, over 65 years old, pregnant, a single parent, mentally ill or have experienced violence, you belong to this group and may be entitled to special benefits and appropriate housing. [46]

You have the right to be classified as particularly vulnerable, even though it is not yet clear what the procedure for this is.

In Baden-Württemberg, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transsexual, transgender and intersexual people are explicitly classified as particularly vulnerable. This has been confirmed by the Ministry for Social Affairs. [47]

Working in the accomodation facility

May my benefits be reduced if I cannot or do not want to take over the ,charitable work' assigned to me in the institution?

If your benefit (personal cash) [48] is reduced in the event of rejection of charitable work, it is your right to have this checked under labour law. These sanctions violate the basic right to a decent subsistence minimum. If anyone has their benefits cut for turning down such work "without a valid reason", please contact us.

We want to take action against these cuts together with the help of trade unions and lawyers.

34] Anti-discrimination Counselling Brandenburg, Fundamental Rights for Fugitives in Community Accommodations S.4, December 2018

35] "The protection of the General Equal Treatment Act applies to all persons, regardless of their residence status. For people who have not been living in Germany for long, this protection is particularly important in the areas of work, housing and services. However, various studies conducted by the Anti-Discrimination Agency show that it is precisely in these areas of life that fugitives experience discrimination particularly frequently". Thus writes the Antidiskriminierungsstelle of the federation.

37] Although access to medical care is significantly restricted under §4 and §6, chronic illnesses, for example, are excluded. "The AsylbLG, like any other law, must be implemented in accordance with the constitution. Articles 1, 2 and 20 of the Basic Law (Human Dignity, Right to Life and Physical Integrity, Principle of the Social State), medical ethics and human rights give rise to a right to treatment in accordance with all standards customary in Germany" (Georg Claasen, Flüchtlingsrat Berlin).

39] Asylum Seeker Benefits Act §2

[40] According to DIRECTIVE 2013/33/EU OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIA-MENT AND OF THE COUNCIL of 26 June 2013 laving down standards for the reception of applicants for international protection. Article 21 specifies which categories of persons are particularly in need of protection, including "persons" with mental disorders and persons who have been subjected to torture, rape or other serious forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence, such as female genital mutilation". Article 22 also states that this special vulnerability must be taken into account. The Federal Working Community of Psychosocial Centres for Refugees and Victims of Torture proposes low-threshold counselling interviews by specialist personnel for the determination of these cases. According to the EU Reception Directive (2013/33/EU), which is also confirmed in the Refugee Reception Act of Baden-Württemberg (§5), there is an increased need for protection especially for the following groups of persons: Minors, unaccompanied minors, disabled persons, persons with serious physical illnesses, elderly persons (i.e. persons over 65 years of age), pregnant women, single parents with minor children, victims of human trafficking, persons with mental disorders, persons who have suffered torture, rape or other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence, such as victims of female genital mutilation.

Survey regarding living conditions and violations of basic rights in refugee reception centres / camps

Between May and September 2019, we are conducting a survey of residents in all reception centres for refugees in Baden-Württemberg.

For this purpose, the Antiracist Network Baden-Württemberg and the Refugee Council of Baden-Württemberg have produced a questionnaire. The questionnaire can be filled out anonymously. We will be consulting residents of the camps in Heidelberg, Mannheim, Karlsruhe, Freiburg, Ellwangen, Tübingen, Sigmaringen and Donaueschingen.

If you would like to participate in the survey, please send an Email to: info@stop-deportation.de
